DIRECTOR'S ADVICE-SEEKING SYSTEM (DASS)

Background

The Director's Advice-Seeking System (DASS), consisting of the Director's Advisory Council (DAC) and eight Constituent Committees (Committees), was created in 1998 by California Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs' Office of Legislative and External Affairs to facilitate in the delivery of quality Alcohol and Other Drug (AOD) and problem gambling services in California.

The DAC includes more than 30 members representing alcohol, drug and problem gambling program leaders; judges; directors of provider organizations; AOD educational organizations and/or Counselor Certification Organizations; the County Alcohol and Drug Program Administrators' Association of California (CADPAAC); and the eight Committees.

Purpose and Role

The DAC and Committees, which are not mandated by state law or regulations, exist at the pleasure of the Director and were designed to serve as a "town hall" – advising ADP on program and policy while acting as liaisons to their communities.

In addition to providing advice to the Director from constituent populations within the state, the DAC addresses critical issues from the alcohol, drug and problem gambling fields, identifies barriers that may limit unserved/underserved populations from accessing services, and provides feedback to the community.

The eight Committees were established to advise and assist ADP's Director and Executive Staff in developing strategies to plan and support culturally competent AOD and problem gambling prevention, treatment and recovery services. The purpose of these Committees is to improve and expand alcohol, drug and problem gambling services for California's diverse population.
